

Living Well in Baker County

Dear Extension Friend:

February 2009

OK, OK, OK.....I must have jinxed things last month when I mentioned something about the 80 degree weather we were having in January. I don't know about you, but this Florida girl was frozen when the temperature dipped into the 20's. I hope you all bundled up well.

I'm sure at this point in time you have all heard about the recent recall of peanut butter products due to the outbreak of Salmonella Typhimurium connected to the peanut plant in Georgia. The Food Safety section on page 2 of this month's newsletter you can find an article regarding the recall and find out where you can find a list of the many recalled products.

No matter where you turn these days you hear about how difficult today's economy is with millions of Americans struggling to make ends meet. With that being said, I have decided to devote a section of the newsletter to financial management tips. You'll find those tips in the Money Matters section on page 3.

Hope you all enjoy the Newsletter, and as always if you have any questions, concerns or suggestions please give me a call.

Food Safety: Peanut Butter Recall

Chances are you have heard something on the news regarding the recent recall of hundreds of peanut butter products due to the outbreak of Salmonella Typhimurium. I have received several calls in the past few days from those of you concerned about what's in your pantry.

As I am writing this article 491 persons from 43 states have been infected with the outbreak strain of Salmonella Typhimurium. At this time there have been no reported cases in the state of Florida. Investigations in several states by the Department of Health, Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and the Georgia Department of Agriculture have confirmed the outbreak strain of Salmonella Typhimurium in King Nut brand peanut butter which is produced by Peanut Corporation of America (PCA) in Blakely, Georgia. This facility, which is no longer producing any products, has expanded its recall to include all peanut butter and peanut paste produced at this plant since July 1, 2008. Peanut butter and peanut butter paste was not sold directly to consumers but was distributed to institutions, food service providers, food manufacturers and distributors in many states and countries. Peanut butter and peanut paste is commonly used as an ingredient in many products, including cookies, crackers, cereal, candy, ice cream, pet treats, and other foods.

More than 180 peanut butter-containing products produced by a variety of companies (including Austin and Keebler) may have been made with the ingredients recalled by PCA. The list of currently recalled products can be found on the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's website at www.fda.gov. FDA and the product manufacturers are working to determine the list of affected products, which may be extensive. Many companies have already announced whether their products include ingredients being recalled by Peanut Corporation of America, Georgia, and more companies are expected to make similar announcements. The current list of recall announcements from companies can be found on the FDA website.

At this time the Center for Disease Control and Prevention recommends consumers follow these guidelines:

- Do not eat products that have been recalled and throw them away in a manner that prevents others from eating them. These products include Austin and Keebler brand peanut butter crackers and King Nut brand peanut butter produced since July 1, 2008. The FDA's website has a list of all the recalled lot numbers.
- Postpone eating other peanut butter containing products (such as cookies, crackers, cereal, candy and ice cream) until more information becomes available about which brands may be affected.
- Use the FDA's online database to check if foods you're concerned about are on the recall list.
- Call the consumer hotline phone number that may be on any product packaging you have to get information directly from the product manufacturer.

Persons who think they may have become ill from eating peanut butter are advised to consult their health care providers.

If you have any questions or concerns regarding the Salmonella Typhimurium outbreak you can always contact Melanie Thomas, FCS Agent with the Baker County Extension Service at 904-259-3520.

Aging: Choosing A Home As We Age

At some point in time you may need to move from the home you live in now. Your family has probably gotten smaller, and it may be getting harder to keep up your home. You may have become disabled or have developed health problems. It may be time to choose another place to call home...a home that is better suited for your current and future needs.

Moving is always hard. When you feel that you have no choice, it can be even more troubling. For many people, much of the stress comes from trying to decide which type of home would best meet their needs. Choosing the right facility means knowing the level of care needed. Look for the facility that will provide the level of care you need.

Facilities that provide more care cost more money and offer a more medical environment. Not all types of facilities are available in all locations. Your choices may be limited. The place you would most like to choose may cost more than you can afford to pay. Remember, too, that the best location may not be near your home. It may be better to move into a facility that is closest to your primary caregiver, such as one near a family member.

Before you choose a facility, it is important to understand what level of care you need. Ask a representative from the local Area Agency on Aging (call Eldercare Locator at 1-800-677-1116) to help you find out what level of care is right for you.
