Packet Meals

A great way to eat healthy while maintaining sensible portions is to utilize packet cooking. Cooking in packets may be something you remember from scouting or camping. Packet cooking is just not for outdoor cooking anymore. It is a simple way to prepare a variety of meals in a hurry. There are several benefits to packet cooking.

- Quick and easy preparation
- Utilizes healthy cooking method
- Portion Control
- Easy clean up

The Packet

Setting your packet meals up is very simple. Parchment paper works best for various types of foods especially if it is acidic, but aluminum foil can be used also. There are also foil sheets available in the grocery store to make this step simple.

The Protein

You can use any type of protein, seafood, poultry, beef or even plant options such as tofu. Make sure that your protein choice is boneless and skinless to ensure that it cooks quickly as well as reducing extra fat and calories in the meal.

Add Ins

Utilize a variety of vegetables either fresh, frozen or canned. Fresh or dried herbs and seasonings add a blast of flavor. Adding any type of sauce to your packet adds flavor as well stick to low calorie low sodium when possible. Once complete just seal and cook.
